5. Evidence of Success:

Through the organization of various academic and co-curricular programs for different stakeholders, the institution successfully enhanced academic exposure, adapted to the new normal of online learning, and provided career opportunities in emerging fields across disciplines, leading to positive and productive outcomes. In addition to academic sessions, the college conducted several online competitions and activities, which allowed students to nurture their inner selves and contribute to improving the environment during the lockdown period.

Interactive programs focused on women empowerment had a significant impact, with all sessions marked by dynamic and active participation from students. Many participants engaged with the ideas and issues raised, asking relevant questions and fostering the effective dissemination of creative awareness about the necessary attitudinal and behavioral changes. As a result, these programs successfully achieved their goal of promoting lively and vigorous awareness of empowerment, which is essential for building an equitable society.

6. Problems Encountered and Resources Required:

Since some programmes were online mode due to the new normal situation, various communicating software such as Google meet, Zoom etc were used for the purpose. The major issues faced during the sessions were the network range issues and unavailability of supporting digital gadgets. Most of the students belong to the hilly area and majority of them belong to the middle class family.

Cleaning Programme(11.03.2024)

Bhoomithrasena Club volunteers conducted a road cleaning drive along the highway, demonstrating their commitment to environmental cleanliness. Their efforts not only enhance the aesthetic appeal of the area but also contribute to maintaining a hygienic and safe environment for commuters. The club's proactive approach in community service reflects their dedication to fostering a cleaner and healthier society.

ECOALERT

The Bhoomithrasena Club initiated the "ECOALERT" program, with the primary objective of raising environmental consciousness and safeguarding green spaces. An essential component of this endeavor involved the installation of a prominent name board along the National Highway, serving as a visible reminder of the initiative's mission. The program received official inauguration by Municipal Chairperson Smt. Sreelatha, highlighting the community-wide support for environmental causes. College Principal Dr. Swarupa R delivered a keynote address, emphasizing the significance of preserving nature for future generations. Priyanka P, the BMC Convenor, played a pivotal role in coordinating the program's activities and ensuring its success. Dr. Nisa M, along with dedicated BMC volunteers and teachers, actively engaged in various aspects of the initiative, demonstrating their collective commitment to environmental stewardship. The participation of diverse stakeholders underscored the widespread acknowledgment of the importance of environmental conservation within the community. Through collaborative efforts and sustained action, the ECOALERT program aims to foster a culture of environmental responsibility and inspire positive change at both local and global levels.

5. Evidence of Success

. The humanitarian intervention from the students of Mahatma Gandhi College, guides by the faculty with the support of the alumni helped our fellow beings. Nature protection activities are also carried out in an commendable way. Thus timely help in the manner of providing them with required support in various forms turned out to be an inspiration to serve the fellow being – the vision of Mahatma Gandhi and our college. So this best practice proved to be the ideal intervention forstrengthening our society during the new normal days.

6. Problem Encountered and Resources Required

One major difficulty is the lack of widespread awareness and understanding about environmental issues and social inequalities, which can hinder public participation and support. People often prioritize immediate personal or economic concerns over long-term sustainability or humanitarian needs. Additionally, limited funding and resources can restrict the scope and impact of such initiatives, especially in underprivileged or conflict-affected regions. Political and bureaucratic obstacles can further complicate efforts, as policies may be slow to change or insufficiently enforced. Furthermore, resistance from vested interests, such as industries that exploit natural resources or those benefiting from the status quo, can create significant barriers to progress. Societal apathy, coupled with the complexity of addressing multifaceted issues, makes it difficult to achieve meaningful and sustained change in both nature protection and humanitarian efforts.
